Reading Comprehension

Autumn is a season of transformation and beauty, occurring between the warmth of summer and the chill of winter. As the days grow shorter and temperatures decline, trees begin to shed their leaves. The vibrant green foliage turns into shades of gold, crimson, and orange, creating a breath-taking tapestry across the countryside. The sight of leaves falling gently to the ground is a signal that nature is preparing for the cold months ahead.

In the UK, autumn brings with it a variety of traditions and celebrations. Harvest festivals are common, where communities come together to give thanks for the crops gathered over the summer months. Many people enjoy outdoor activities such as apple picking, visiting pumpkin patches, and celebrating Halloween with costumes and spooky decorations. Wildlife also begins to prepare for winter; birds migrate to warmer climates, while hedgehogs and other animals gather food and find shelter.

As the season progresses, it teaches us about change and the importance of preparation, making autumn a truly special time of year.

Using the text, answer the following questions:

1. What does the word "vibrant" mean in the context of the text?
2. How might the communities celebrate harvest festivals, based on the text?
3. In your own words, summarise how autumn affects trees.
4. What do animals do in preparation for winter, as stated in the passage?
5. If autumn teaches us about change, what might spring teach us when it arrives?
